Preston is a motivated full stack developer eager to join an ambitious development team. He is excited to be part of a field that is constantly evolving and expects its workforce to learn and apply new technologies throughout their careers.

Preston learned a development stack consisting of Java, Spring, JPA, SQL, JavaScript, jQuery, Knockout.js, Git, Node.js and Linux. During his training, Preston developed the knowledge to help support software and web application development and assist in the design of software applications and the development of prototypes. Preston also has the ability to create user manuals, and the training needed to perform system tests to look for areas that need improving. His experience also includes troubleshooting and correcting software problems in a fast and efficient manner.

Preston has excellent communication skills with the ability to provide friendly and professional customer service and to relay suggestions, requests and other information that can help to improve performance, speed and to make applications more user-friendly.

Preston has the ability to solve problems as they occur and to communicate with non-technical clients in a way they can understand. Preston enjoys working with complex data structures and program logic, and is constantly looking for opportunities to incorporate software design patterns and relevant frameworks to simplify and improve his code. Preston can follow orders and work as a team without any problems but also has the ability to work alone and still meet tight deadlines.

Before his career in development, Preston enjoyed a successful career as a Chiropractic Physician and business owner. Services included chiropractic, acupuncture, nutritional counseling, and rendering expert medical-legal opinions. He managed all business operations, treatment services, billing, and marketing for 2 offices serving the Aurora and Lakewood, Colorado areas.
